ATLANTIC CITY--The New Jersey Building Materials Dealers Association held its 6th annual round table discussion Thursday.

The annual event focused on New Jersey's sagging real estate market, while featuring the Garden State's premier housing market guru, Jeff Ohtah, who helped to explain the forces that shape the states housing market.

Also discussed, were the real facts about green building. And what is green building you might ask... "Green building is primarily energy efficient housing that are given, for insulation for windows, for doors for siding and foundation lumber," said Richard Alampi, the Executive Director of the NJBMDA.

Green building is set to be a major trend, which is forecasted to directly help the market recover.
